

MARCH 13, 2018

Co-Teaching

With Richard Villa

Time: 8:30-3:30

Place: ESU 13,
Conference Room B/C

Registration Deadline:
February 27, 2018

Audience: Educators
Serving Grades K-6:
Classroom Teachers,
Reading Specialists,
Interventionists, Resource
Teachers, Special Education Staff, Title I
Staff, Instructional Aides, and Administrators

Outcome: Through presentation and viewing of video footage, participants become familiar with the 4 approaches to co-teaching and learn about the benefits and cautions when applying each approach. In addition, scheduling, role clarification, administrative support, lesson planning, and other logistical issues are explored. Participants are provided with tools to assist in establishing trust, facilitating communication and coordination of effort, and making efficient use of available planning time.

Educators at all levels are faced with increased responsibility and accountability for meeting every student's need. Today's educators are expected to collaborate with one another in planning and teaching as they implement Common Core State Standards, meet the needs of an increasingly diverse student body, differentiate instruction and implement RTI.

This workshop will provide practical "how to" strategies for meeting those responsibilities and improving student performance. You will leave knowing how to collaboratively plan and co-teach with others so that both you and your students experience increased success. You will receive tools to assist you and your co-teacher(s) to establish trust, effectively communicate, clarify roles and responsibilities, and engage in effective lesson planning.

"The most valuable resource that all teachers have is each other. Without collaboration our growth is limited to our own perspectives."
